

I am a former investigative reporter for public broadcasting who left the media and started my own internet news service because of racism I encountered in government. I have several questions:

1) What is the impetus for having this meeting - because it is required or because there is a legitimate way that we can increase diversity in media from this exchange?

2) What can we glean from Johnson's selling of BET - that it is more advantageous for minorities to own media channels or sports teams...should minorities be spending more time in trying to start internet, satellite, and digital video streaming instead?

3) How can I get a job in media that would allow me to make enough money to support my family? Do the alternative media outlets pay money?
